

RingCentral Dialpad

We open on our young professional working in her cubicle, taking a call on her computer.

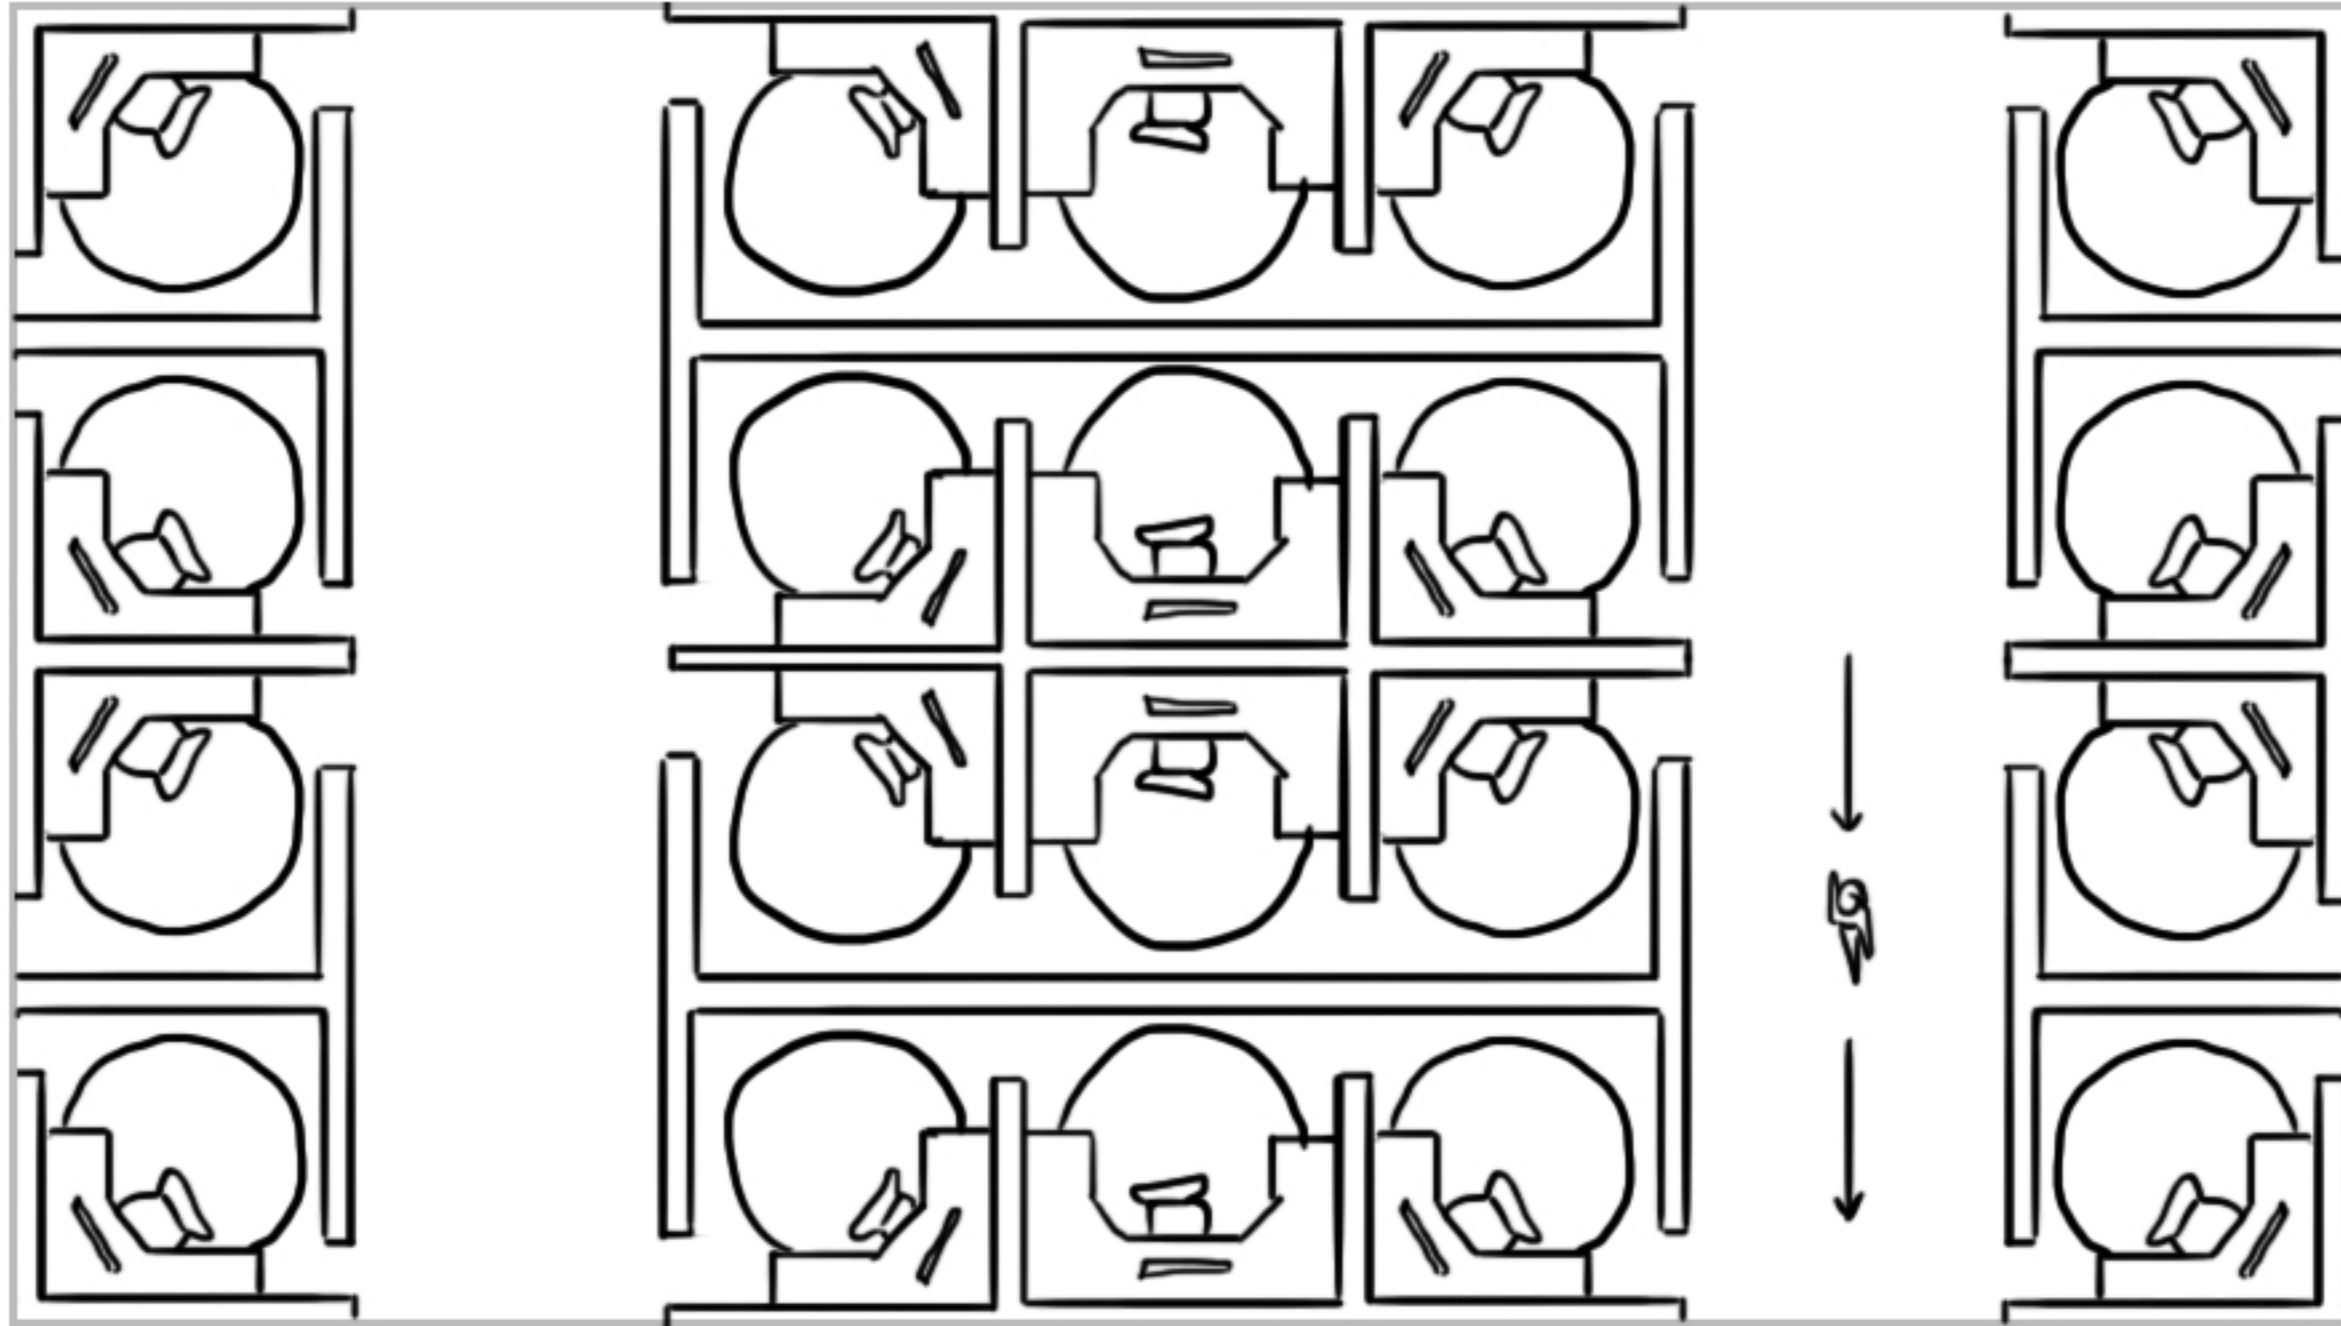

She transfers the call to her mobile.

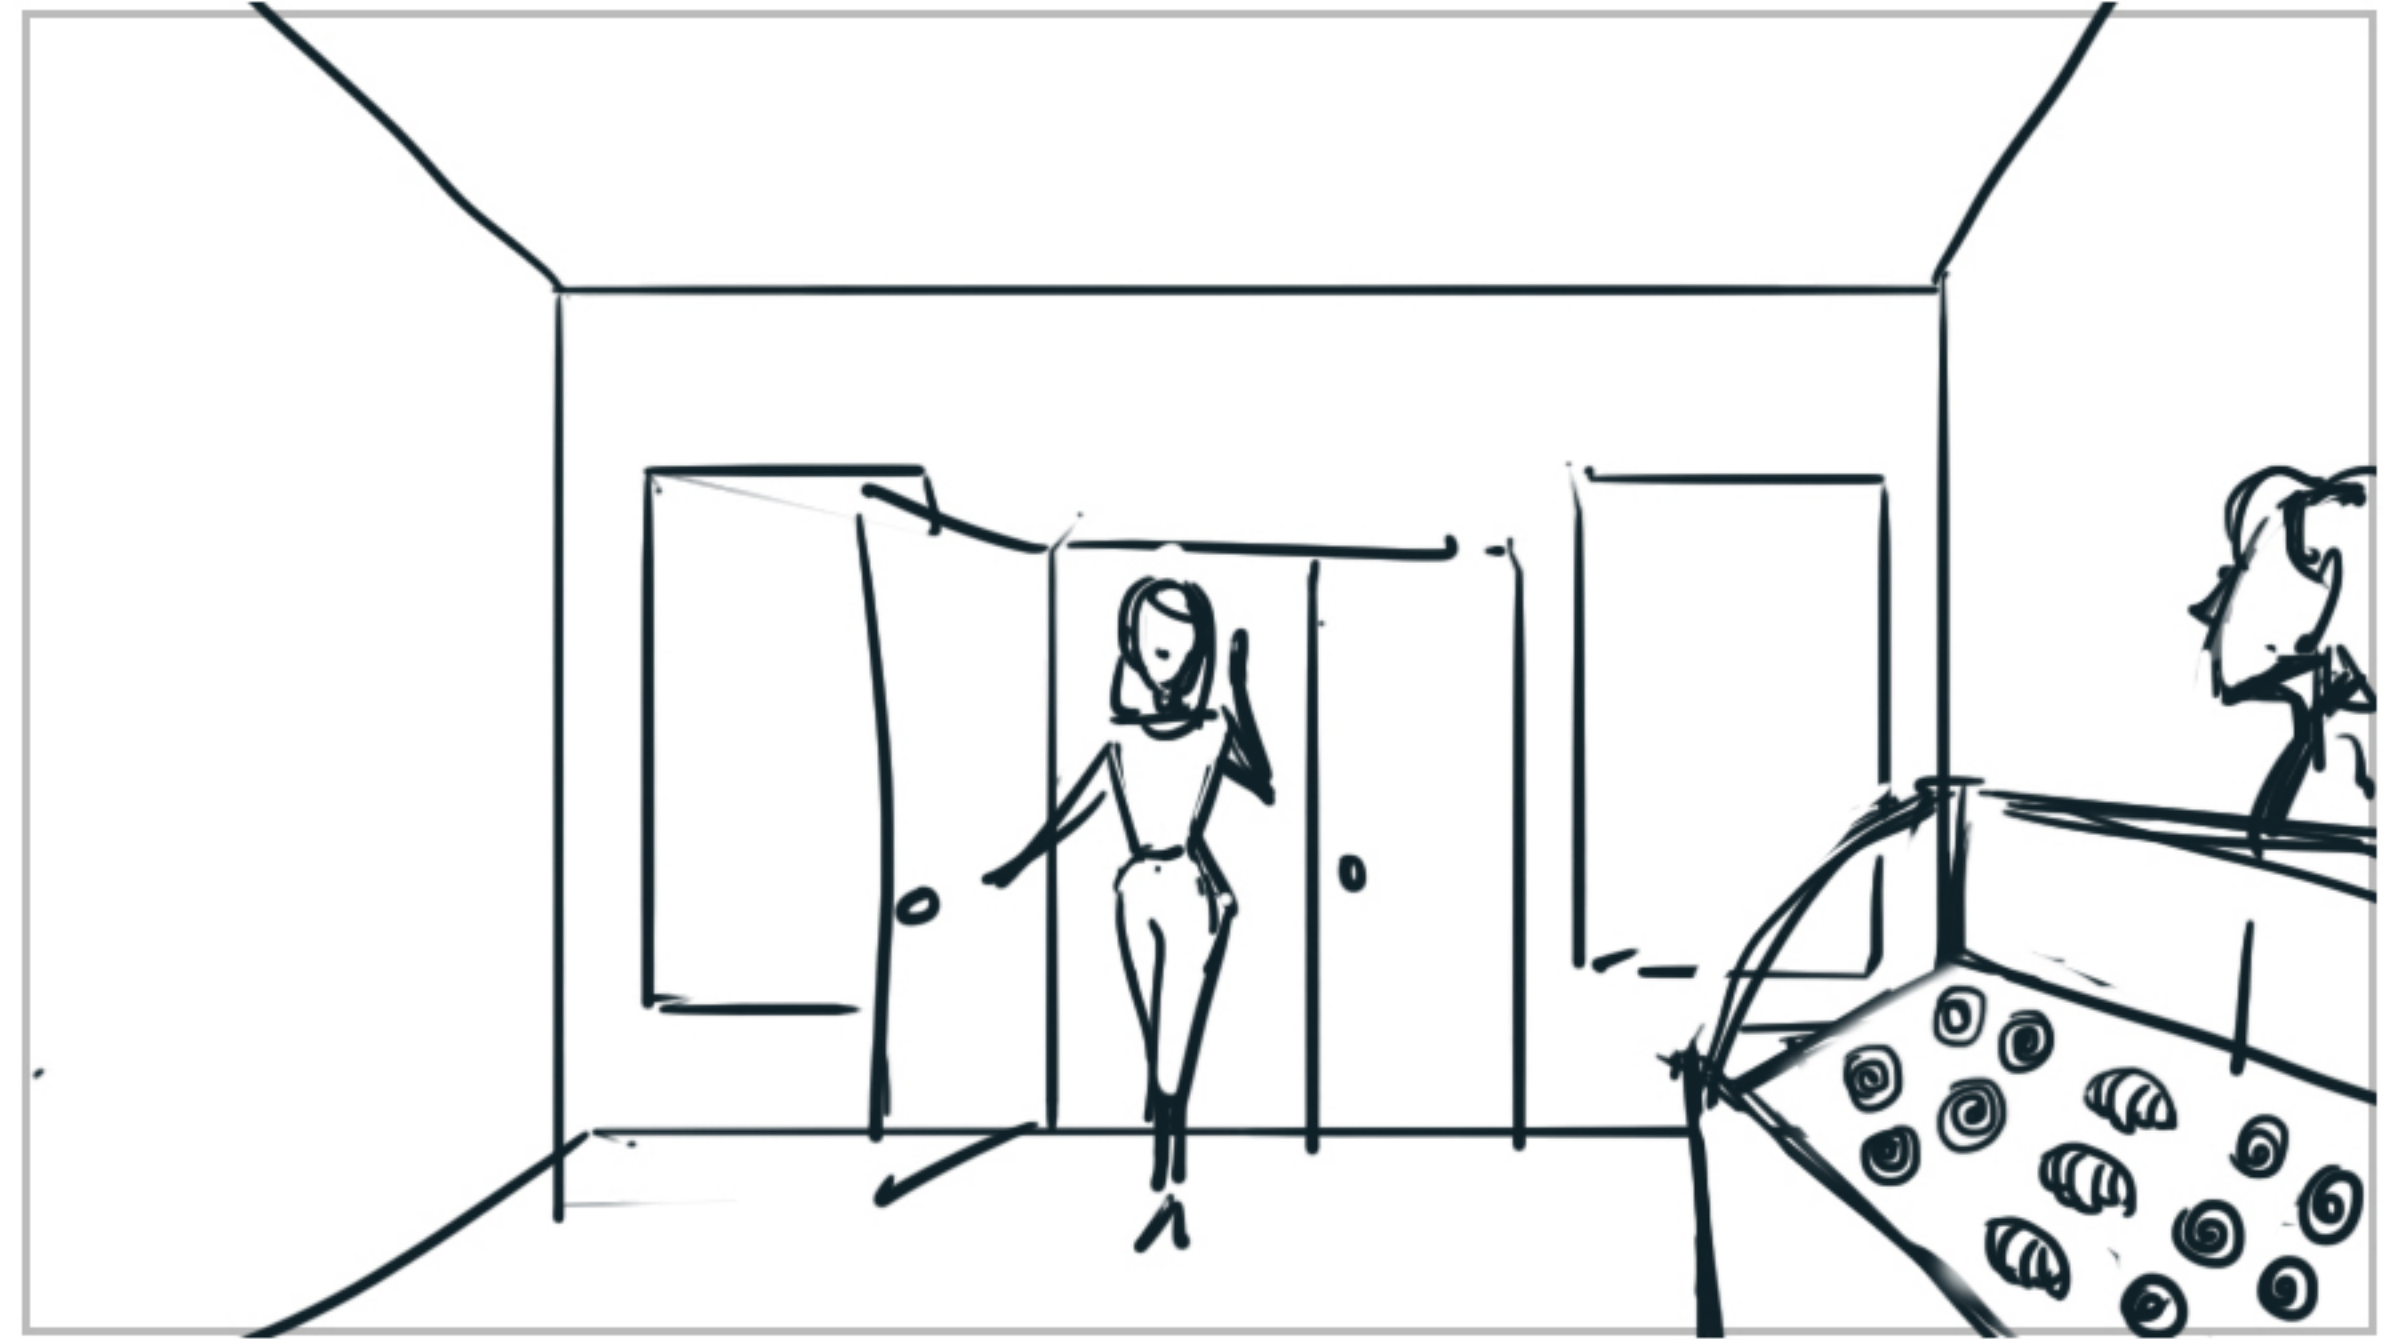

She's talking business as she heads out of the office.

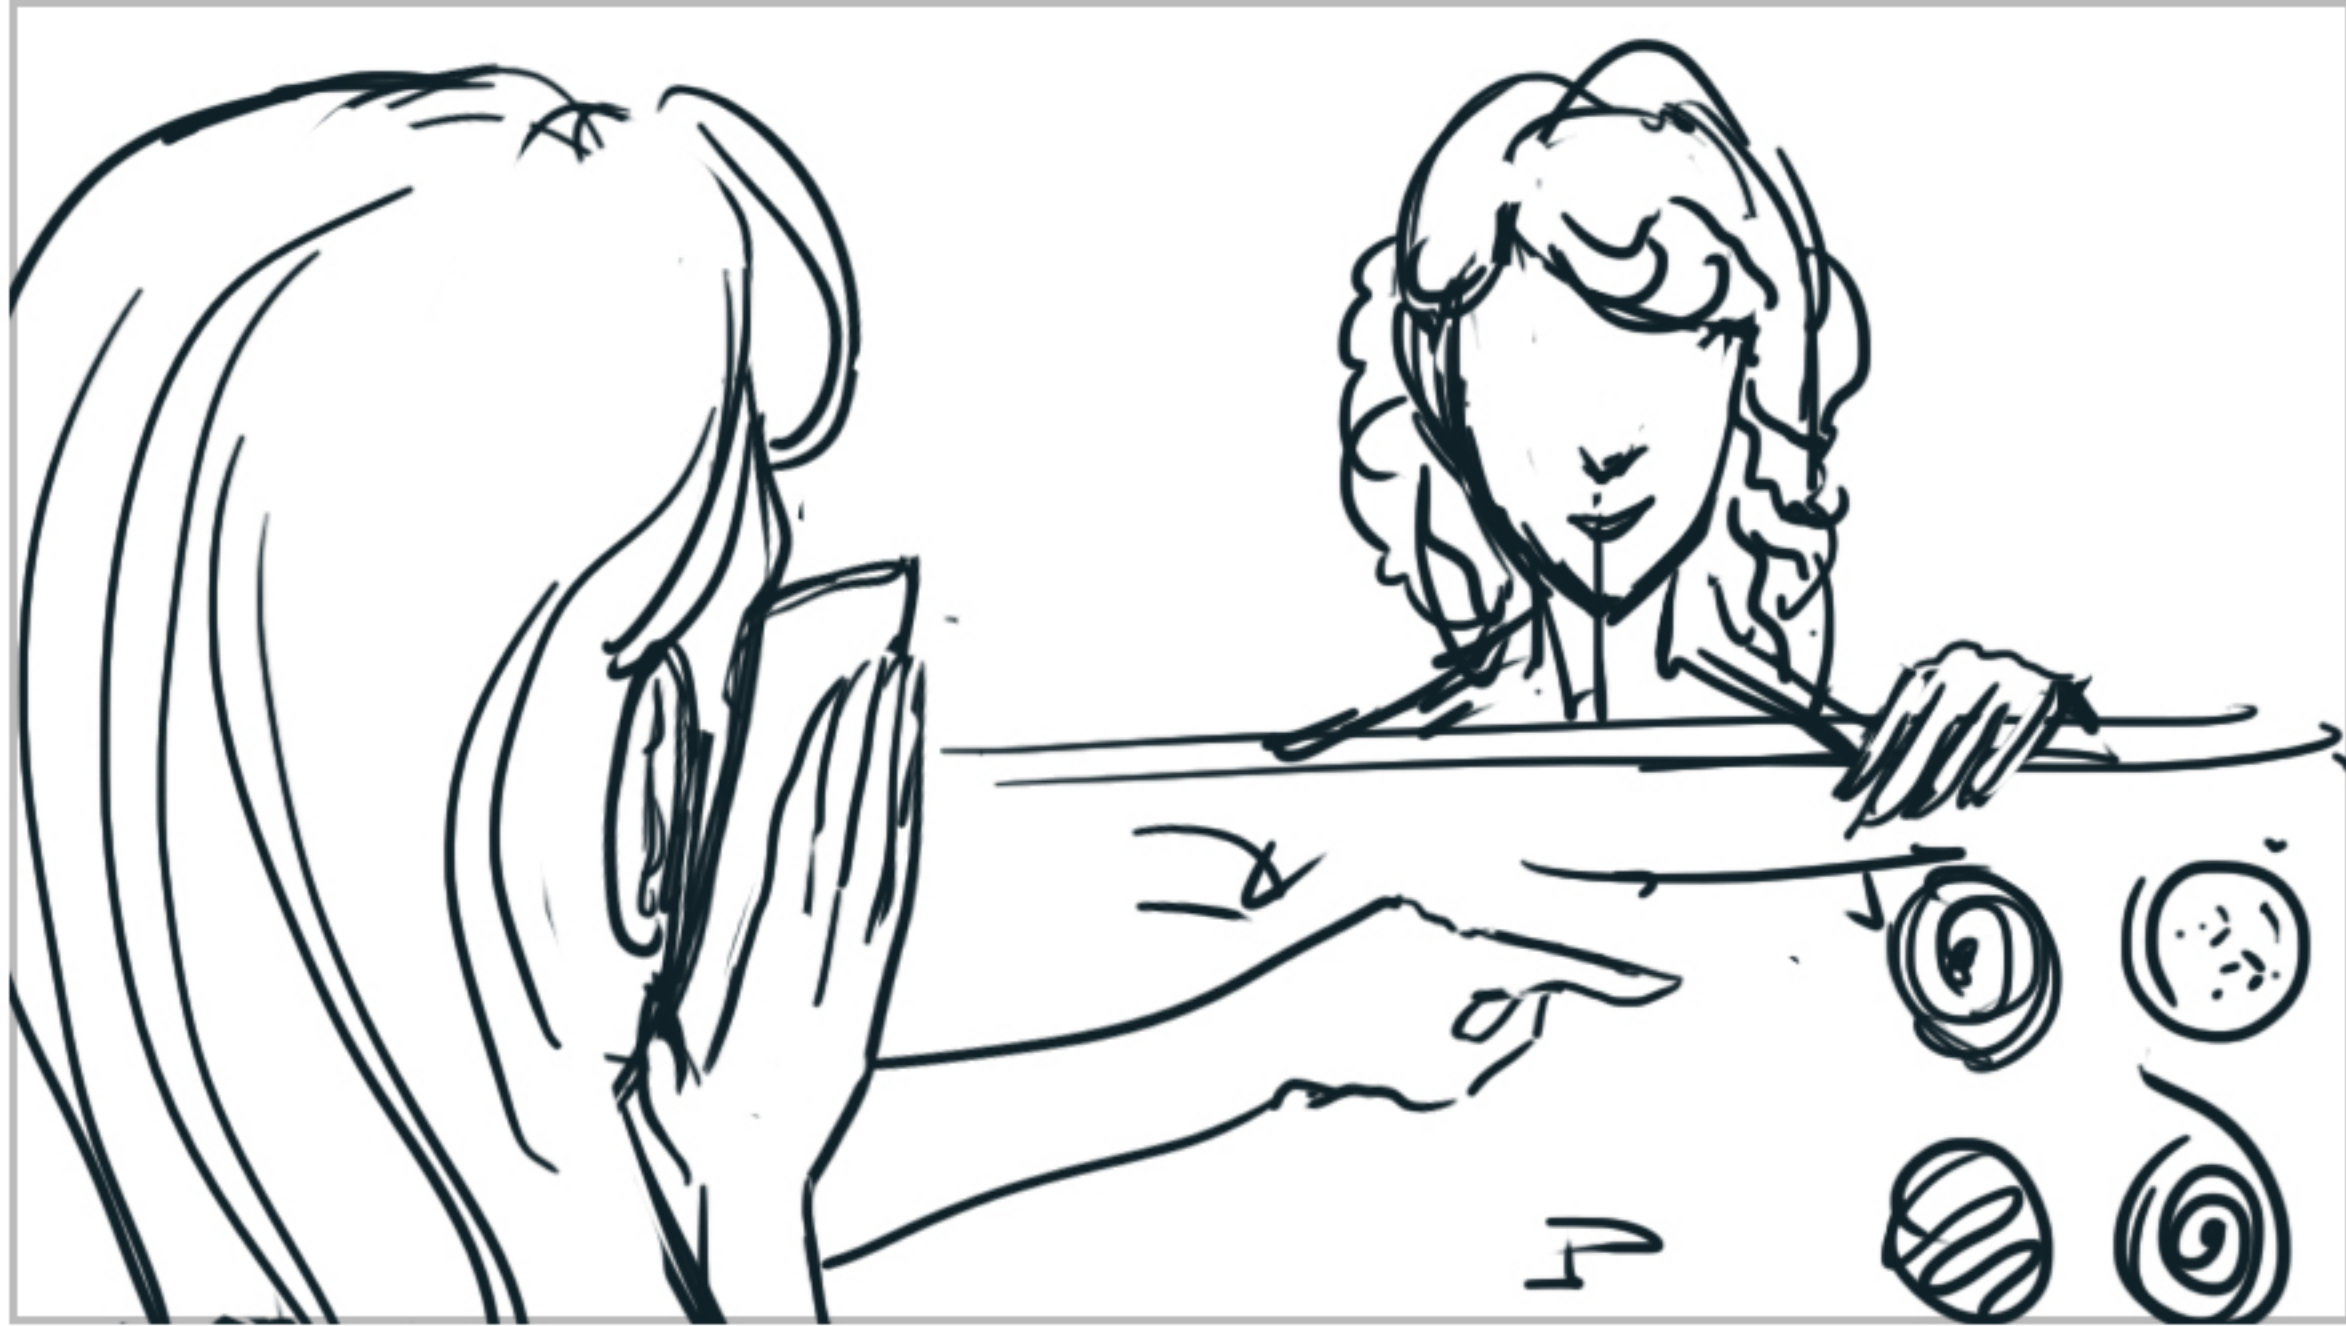

She walks through the rows of cubicles.

From above, we see the aisle of cubes. 12-up "Dialpad" made out of cubicles.

Cut to her walking into a bakery.

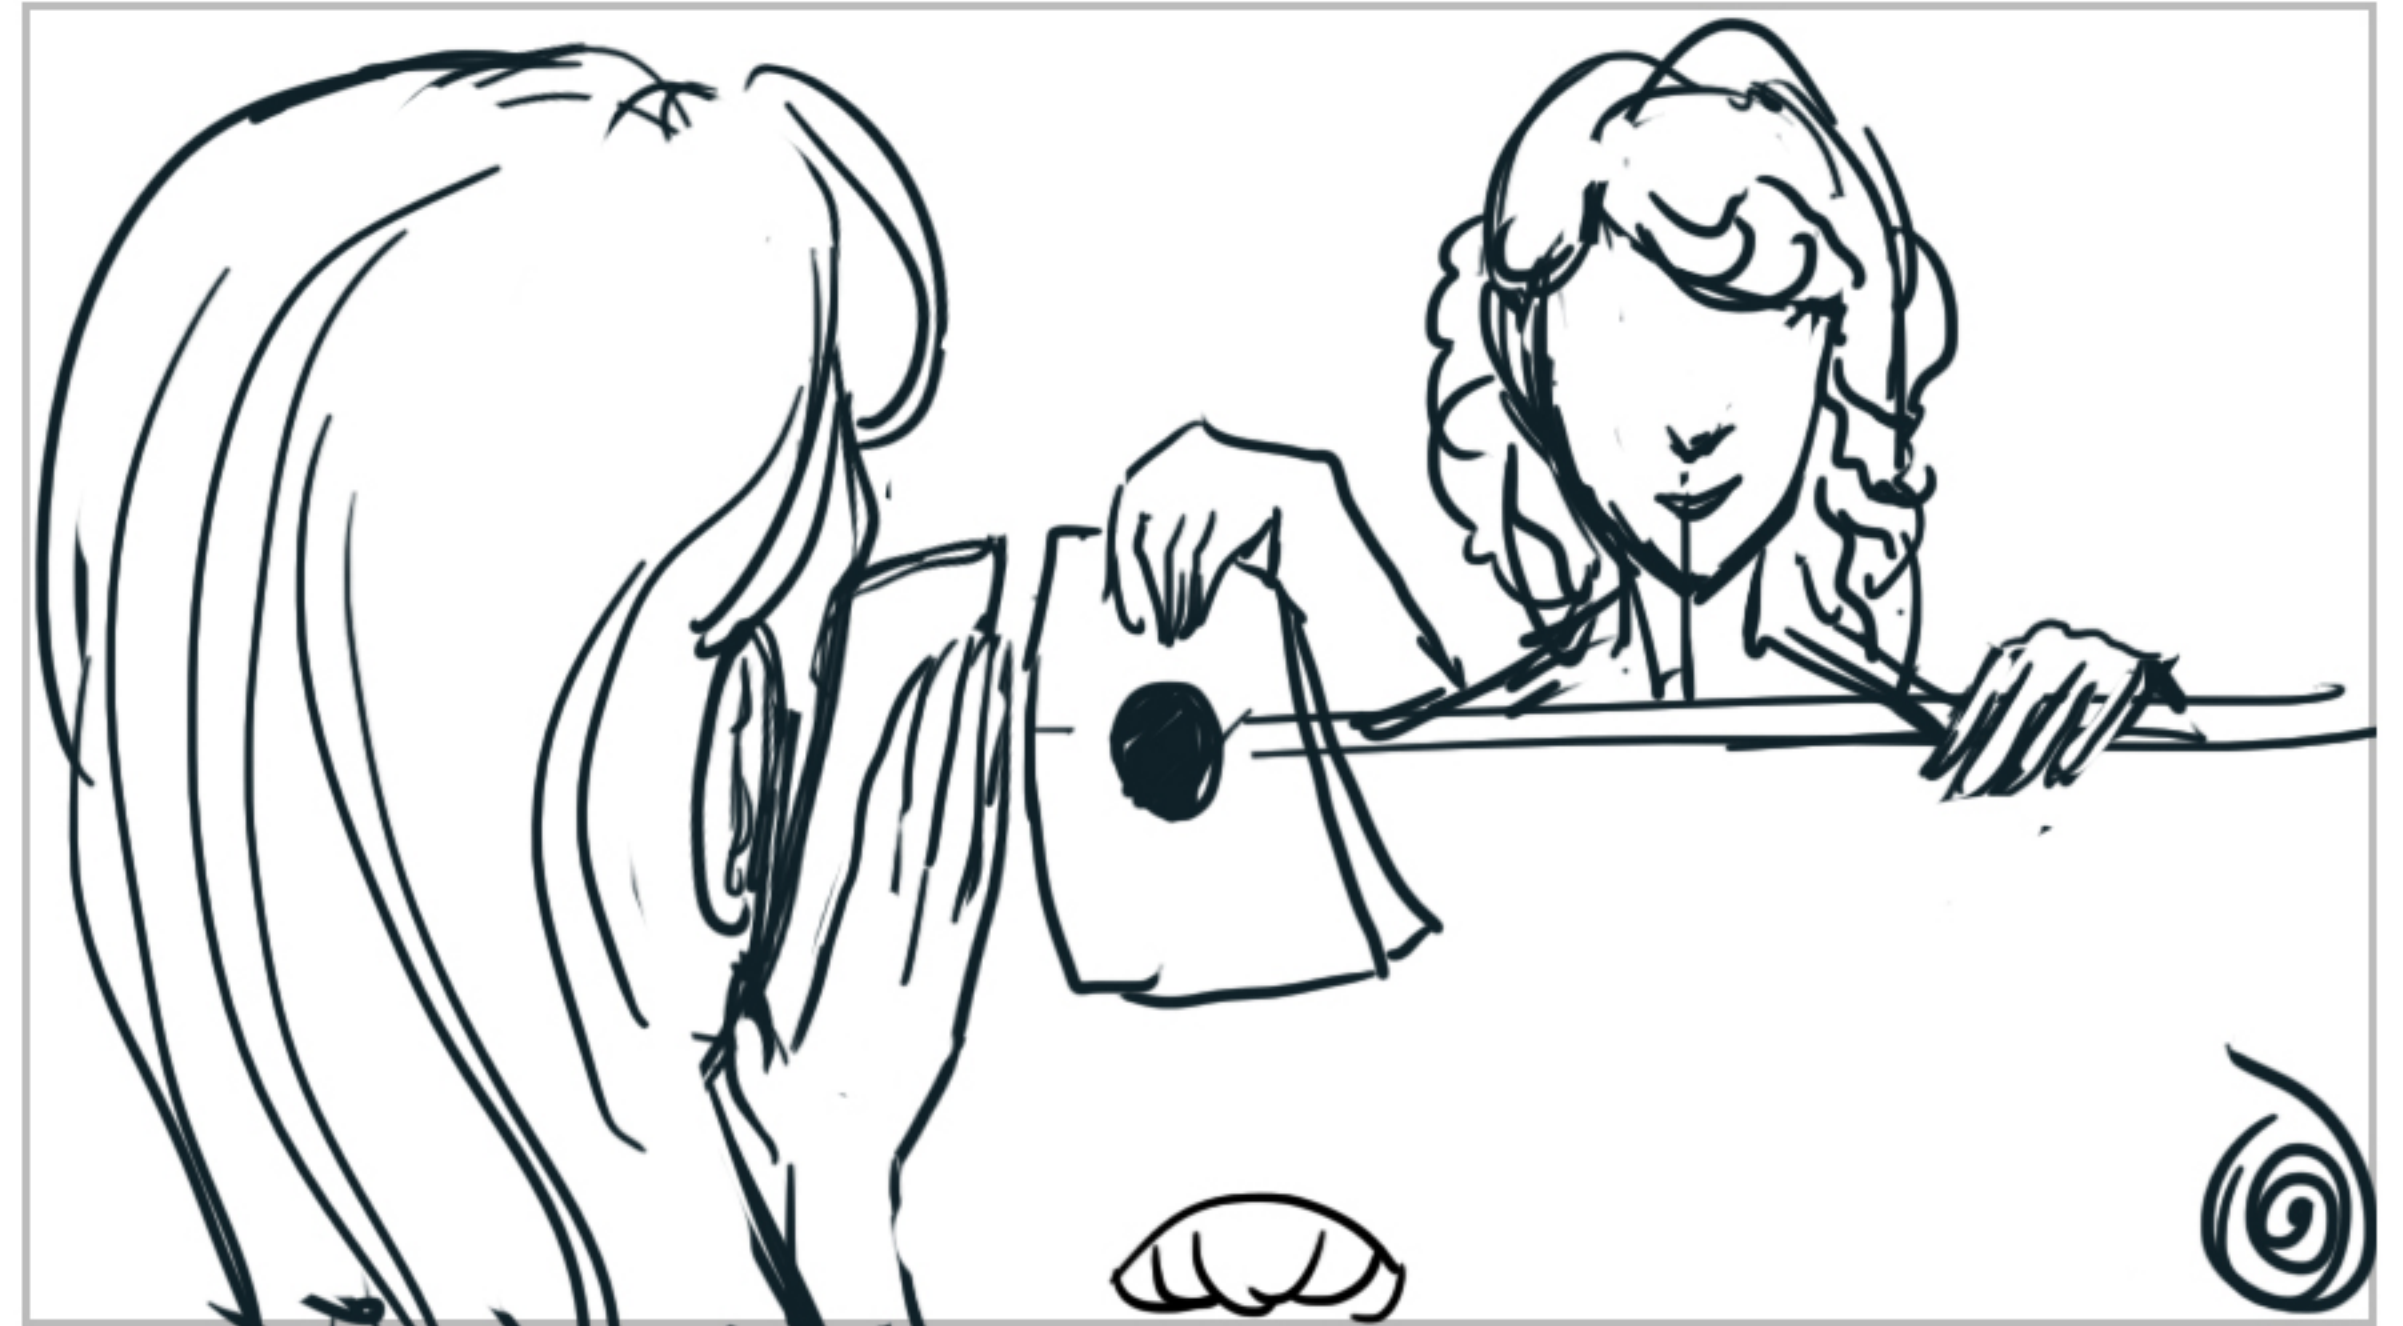

Pointing, she says, "I'll take three of those."

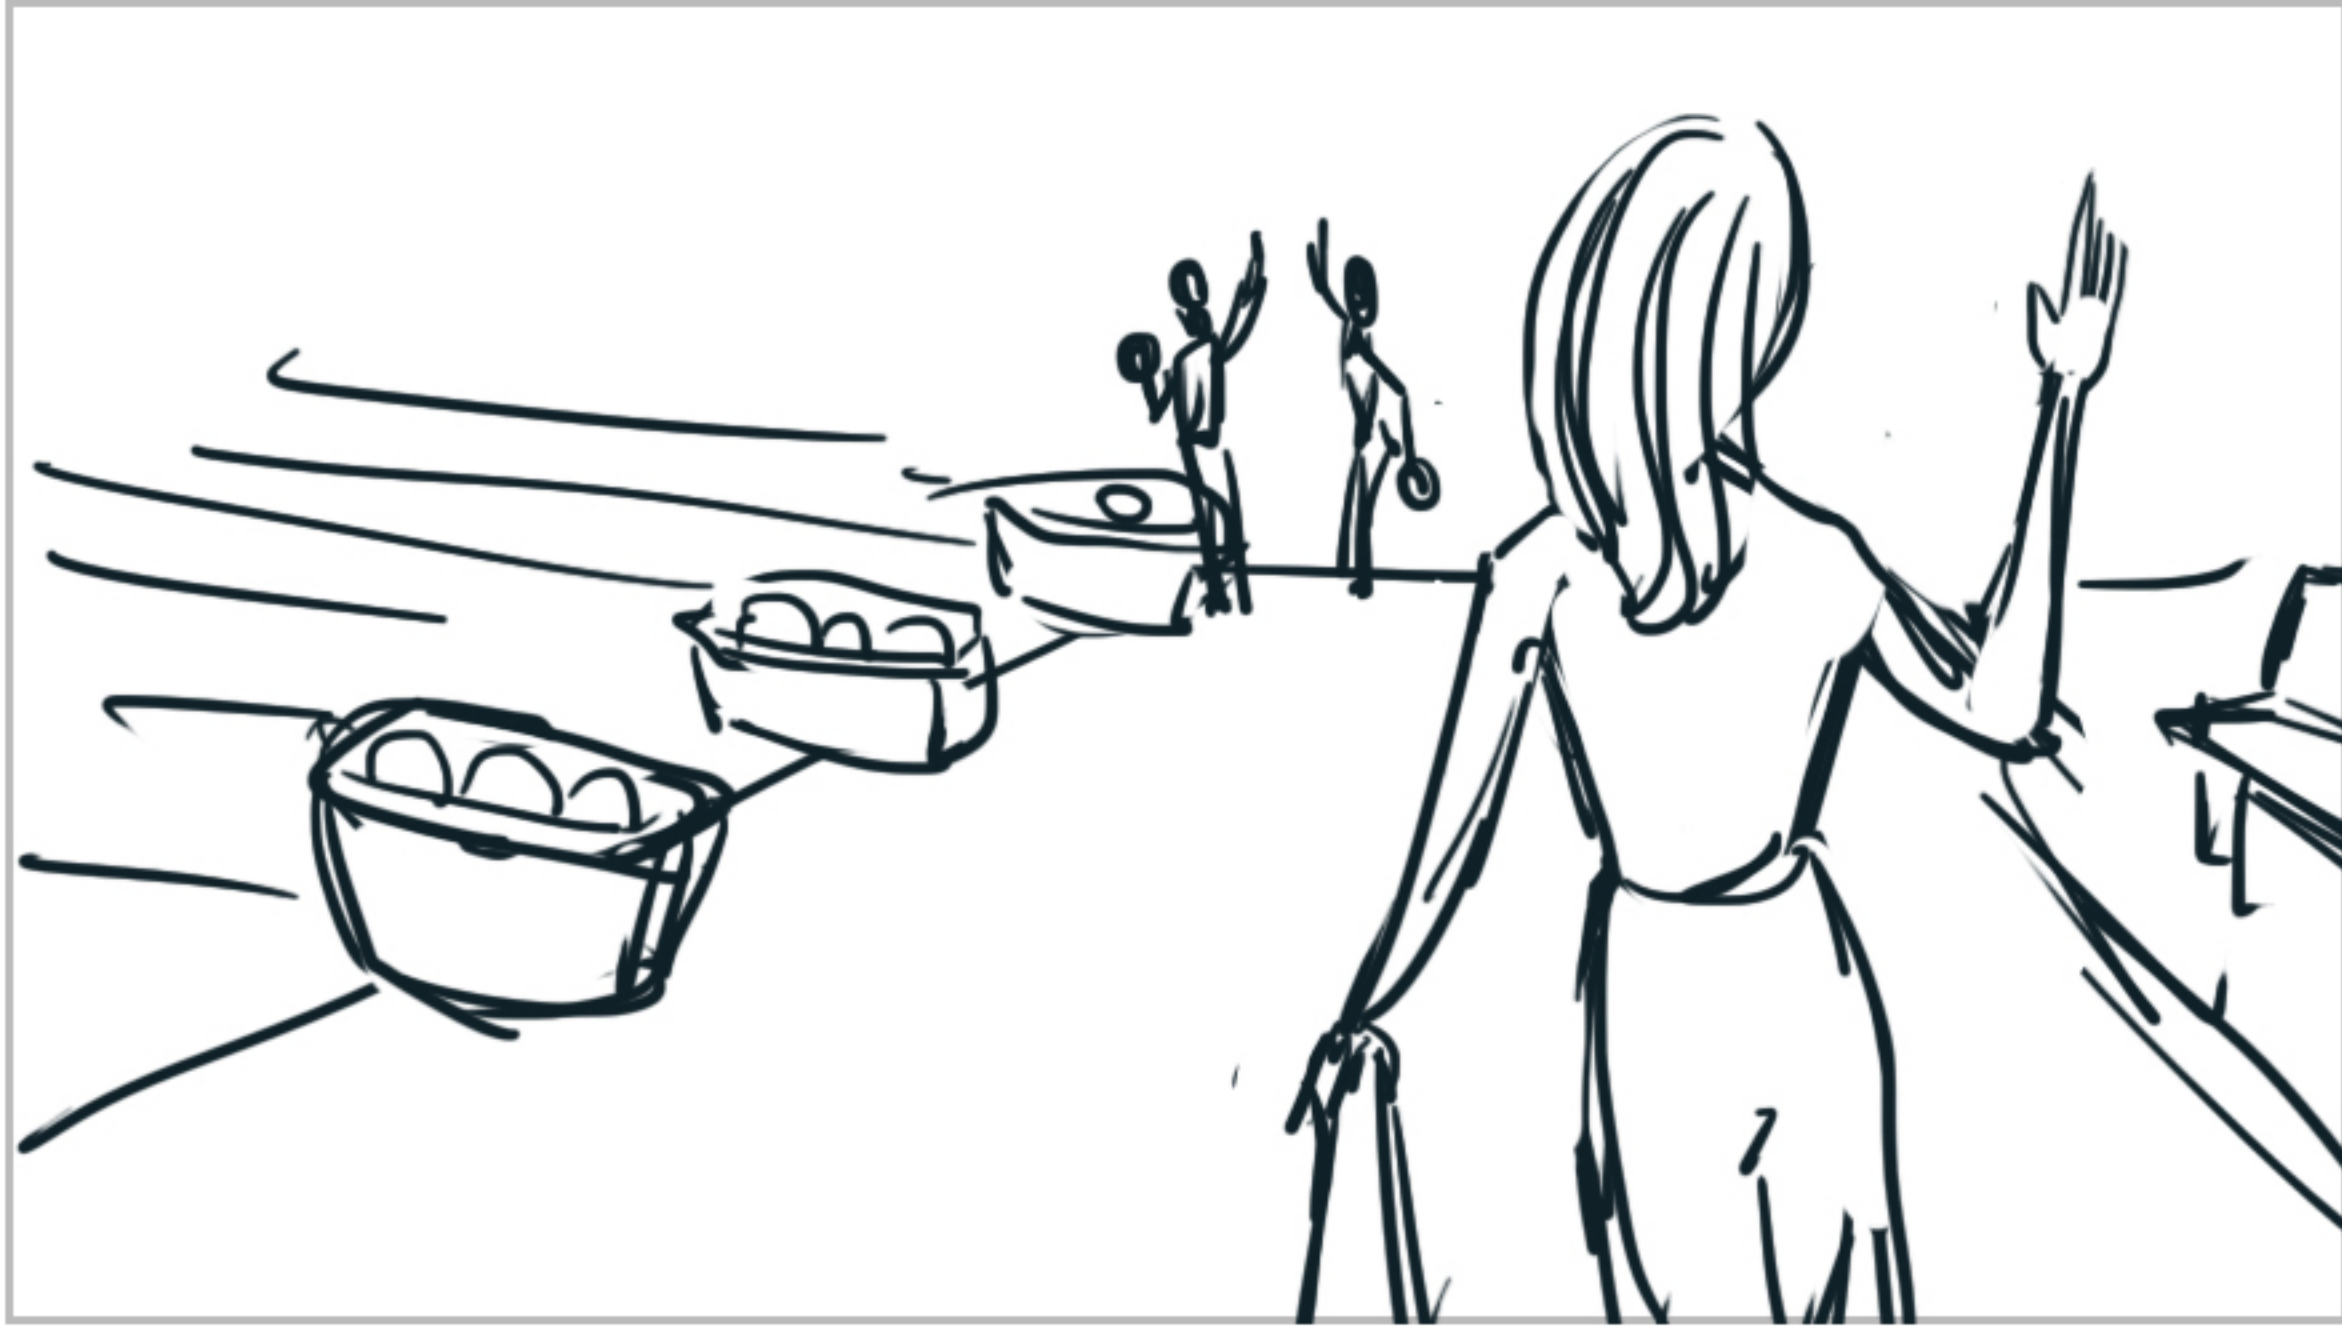

12-up "Dialpad" made out of baked goods.

Cut to her colleague in the office.

Still on her phone, she completes her purchase and leaves.

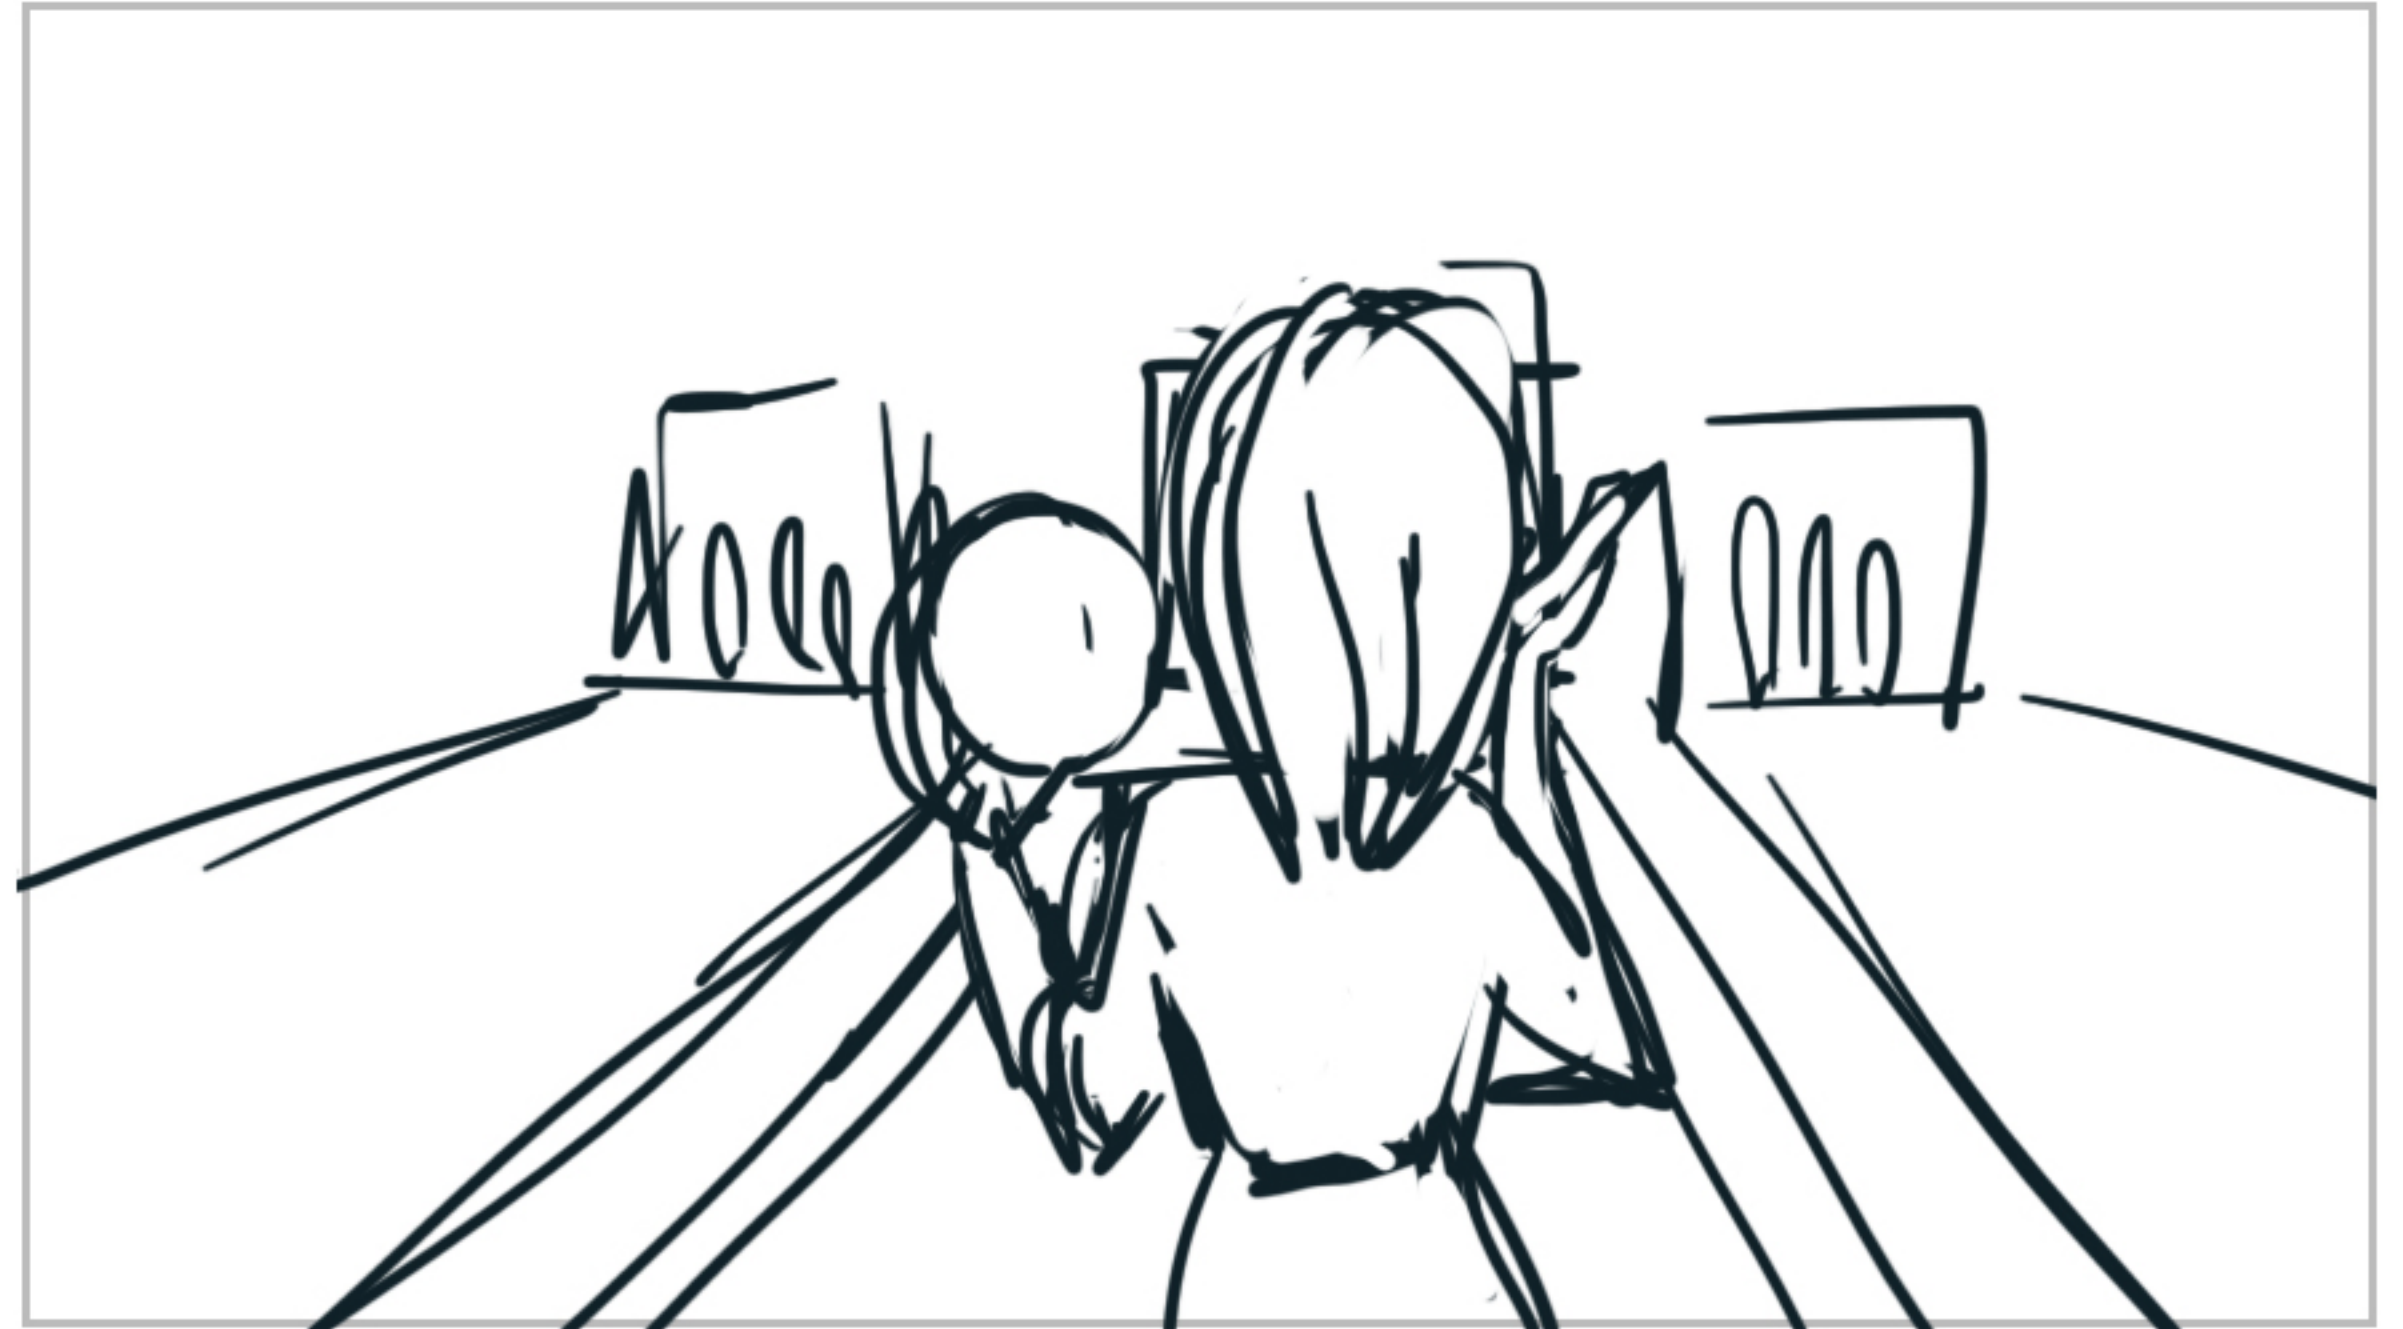

Cut to her walking into the bowling alley, she waves hello to her waiting friends.

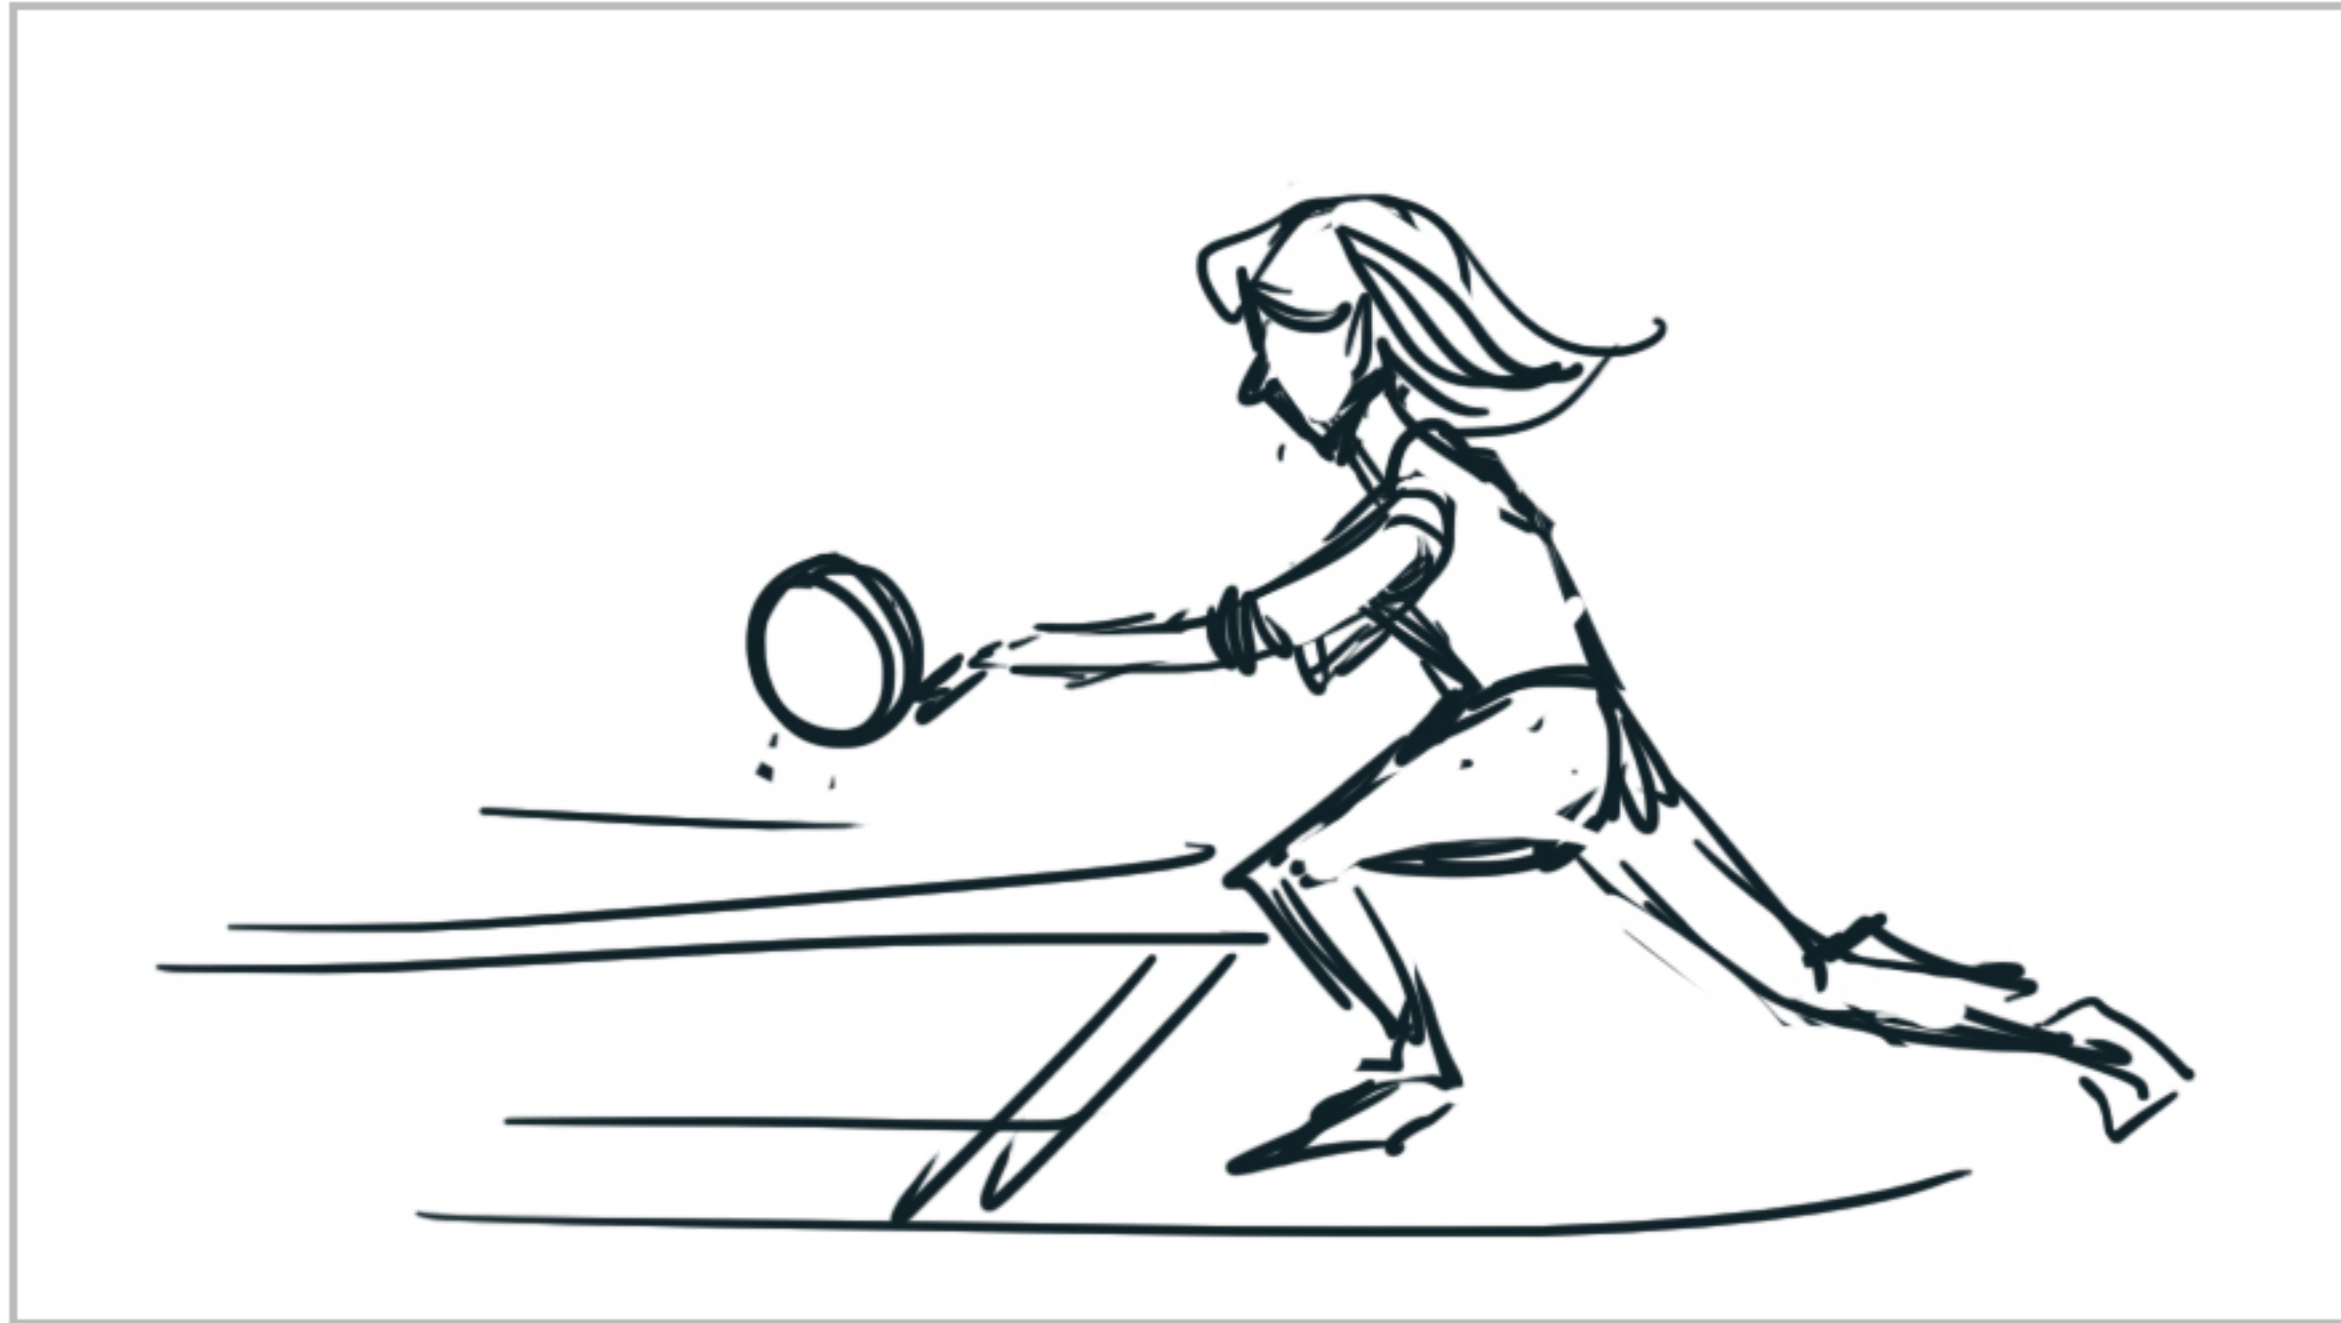

She takes another business call as she sits down.

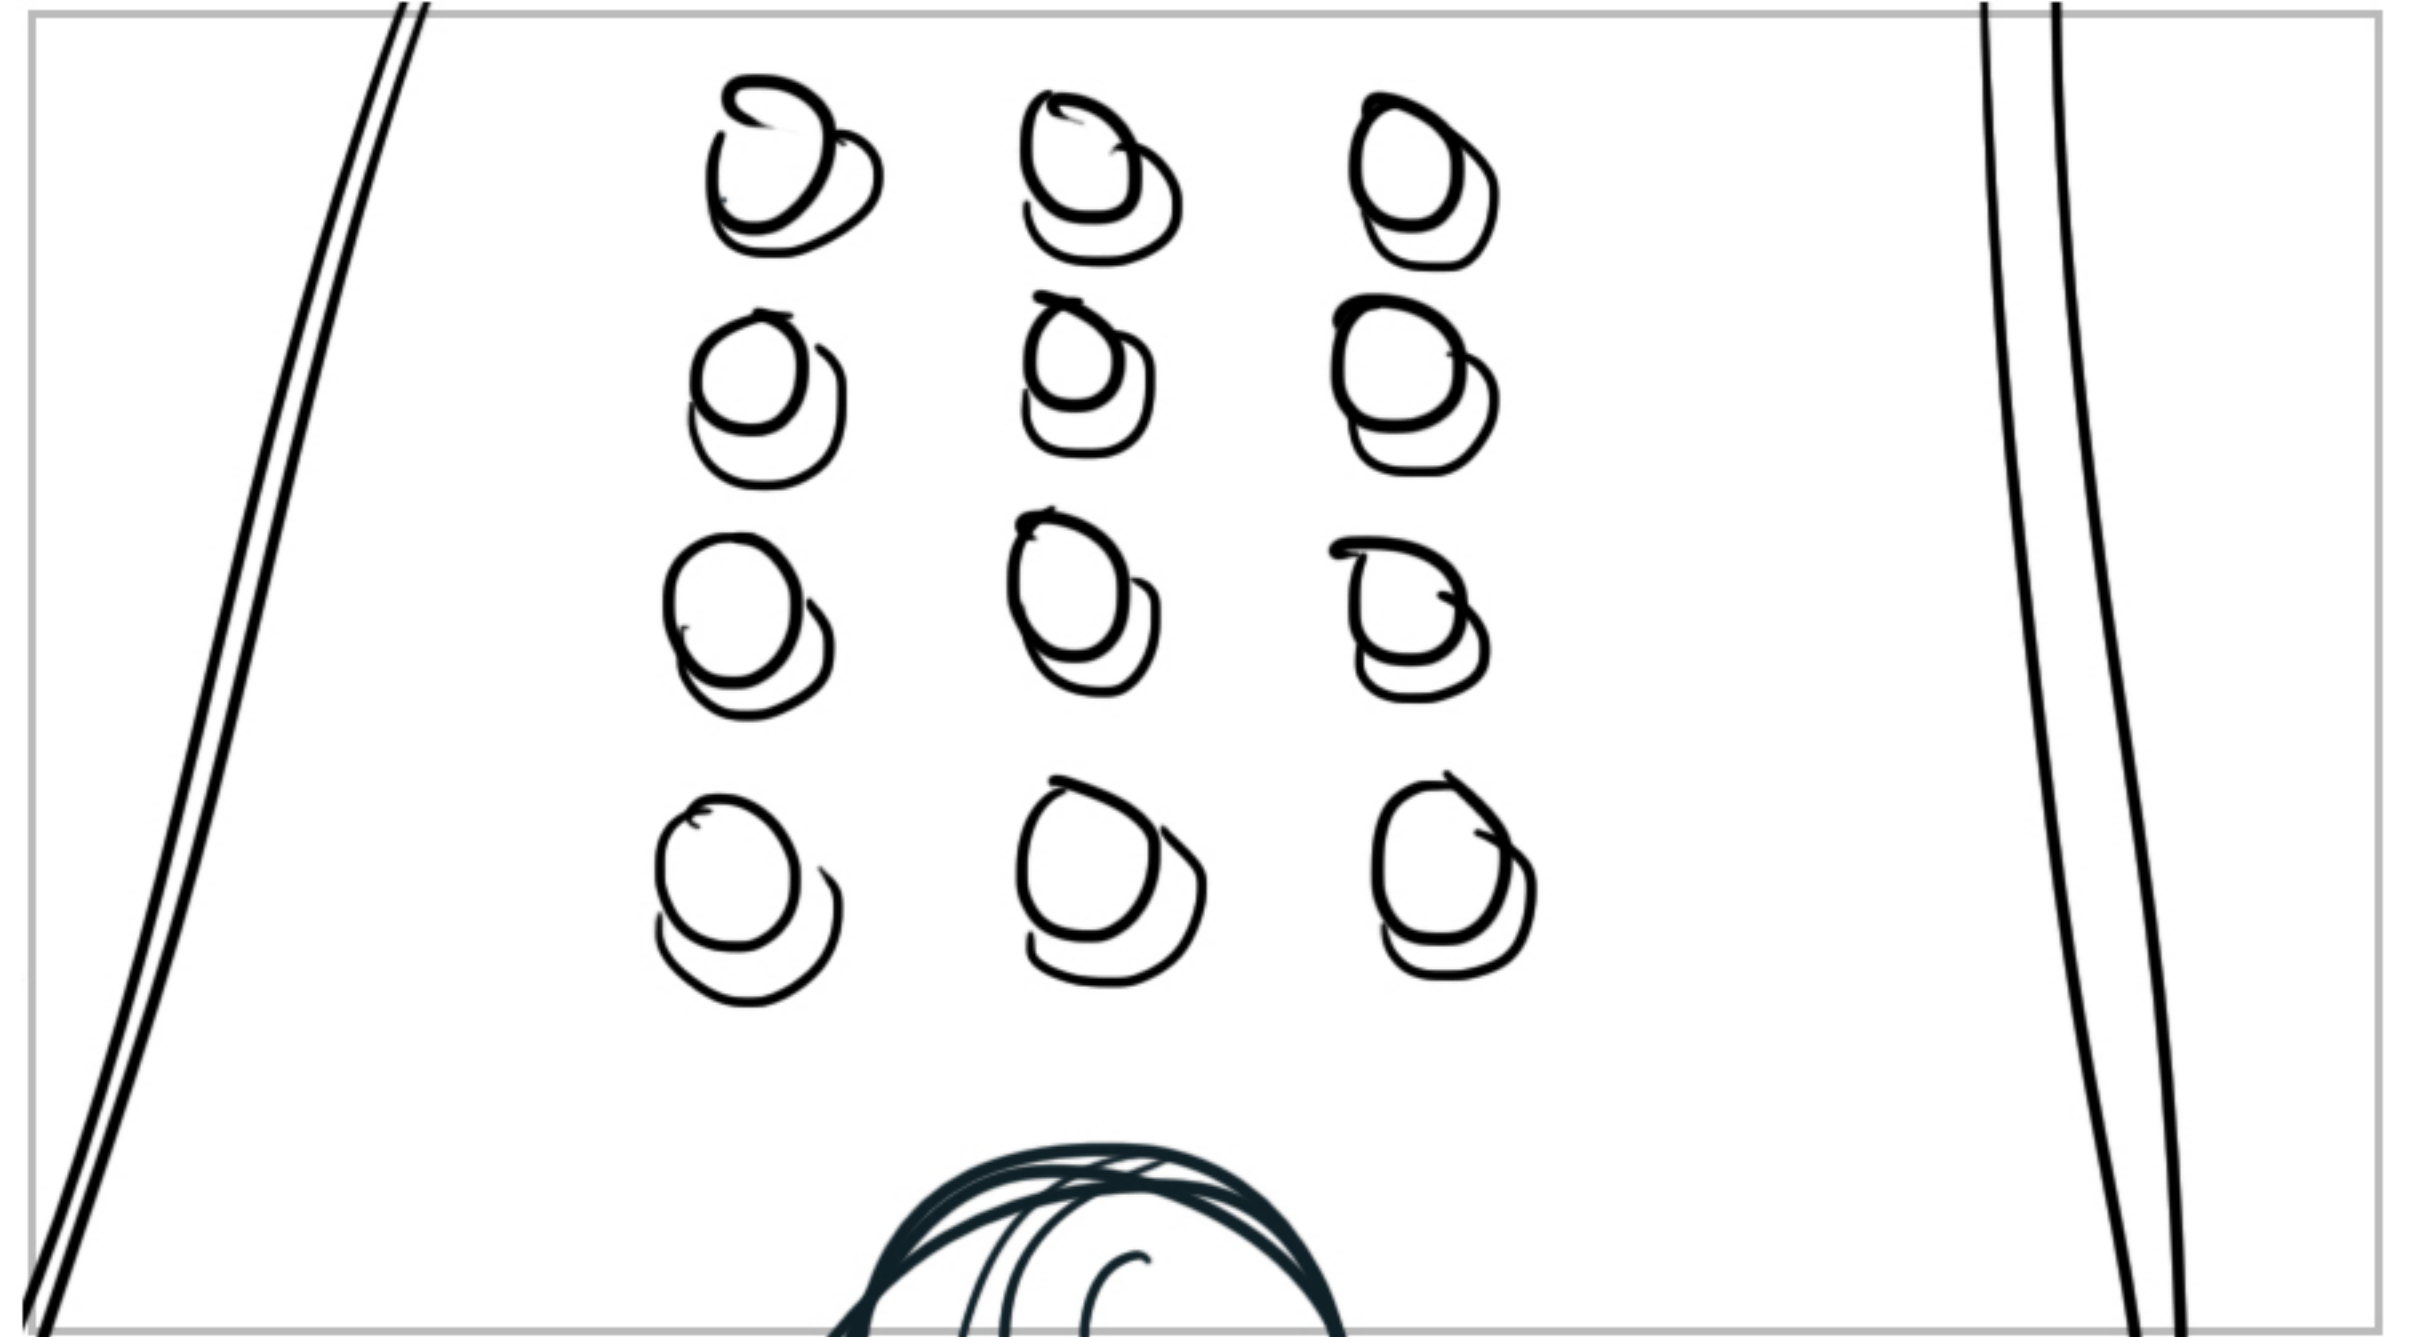

She puts on her bowling shoes.

Her colleagues start talking about the day.

She bowls her turn, talking to her colleagues.

12-up "Dialpad" appears in the pins... and CRASH! as she bowls a strike!

Her colleagues react, "What was that?"

"Just the coffeemaker!"

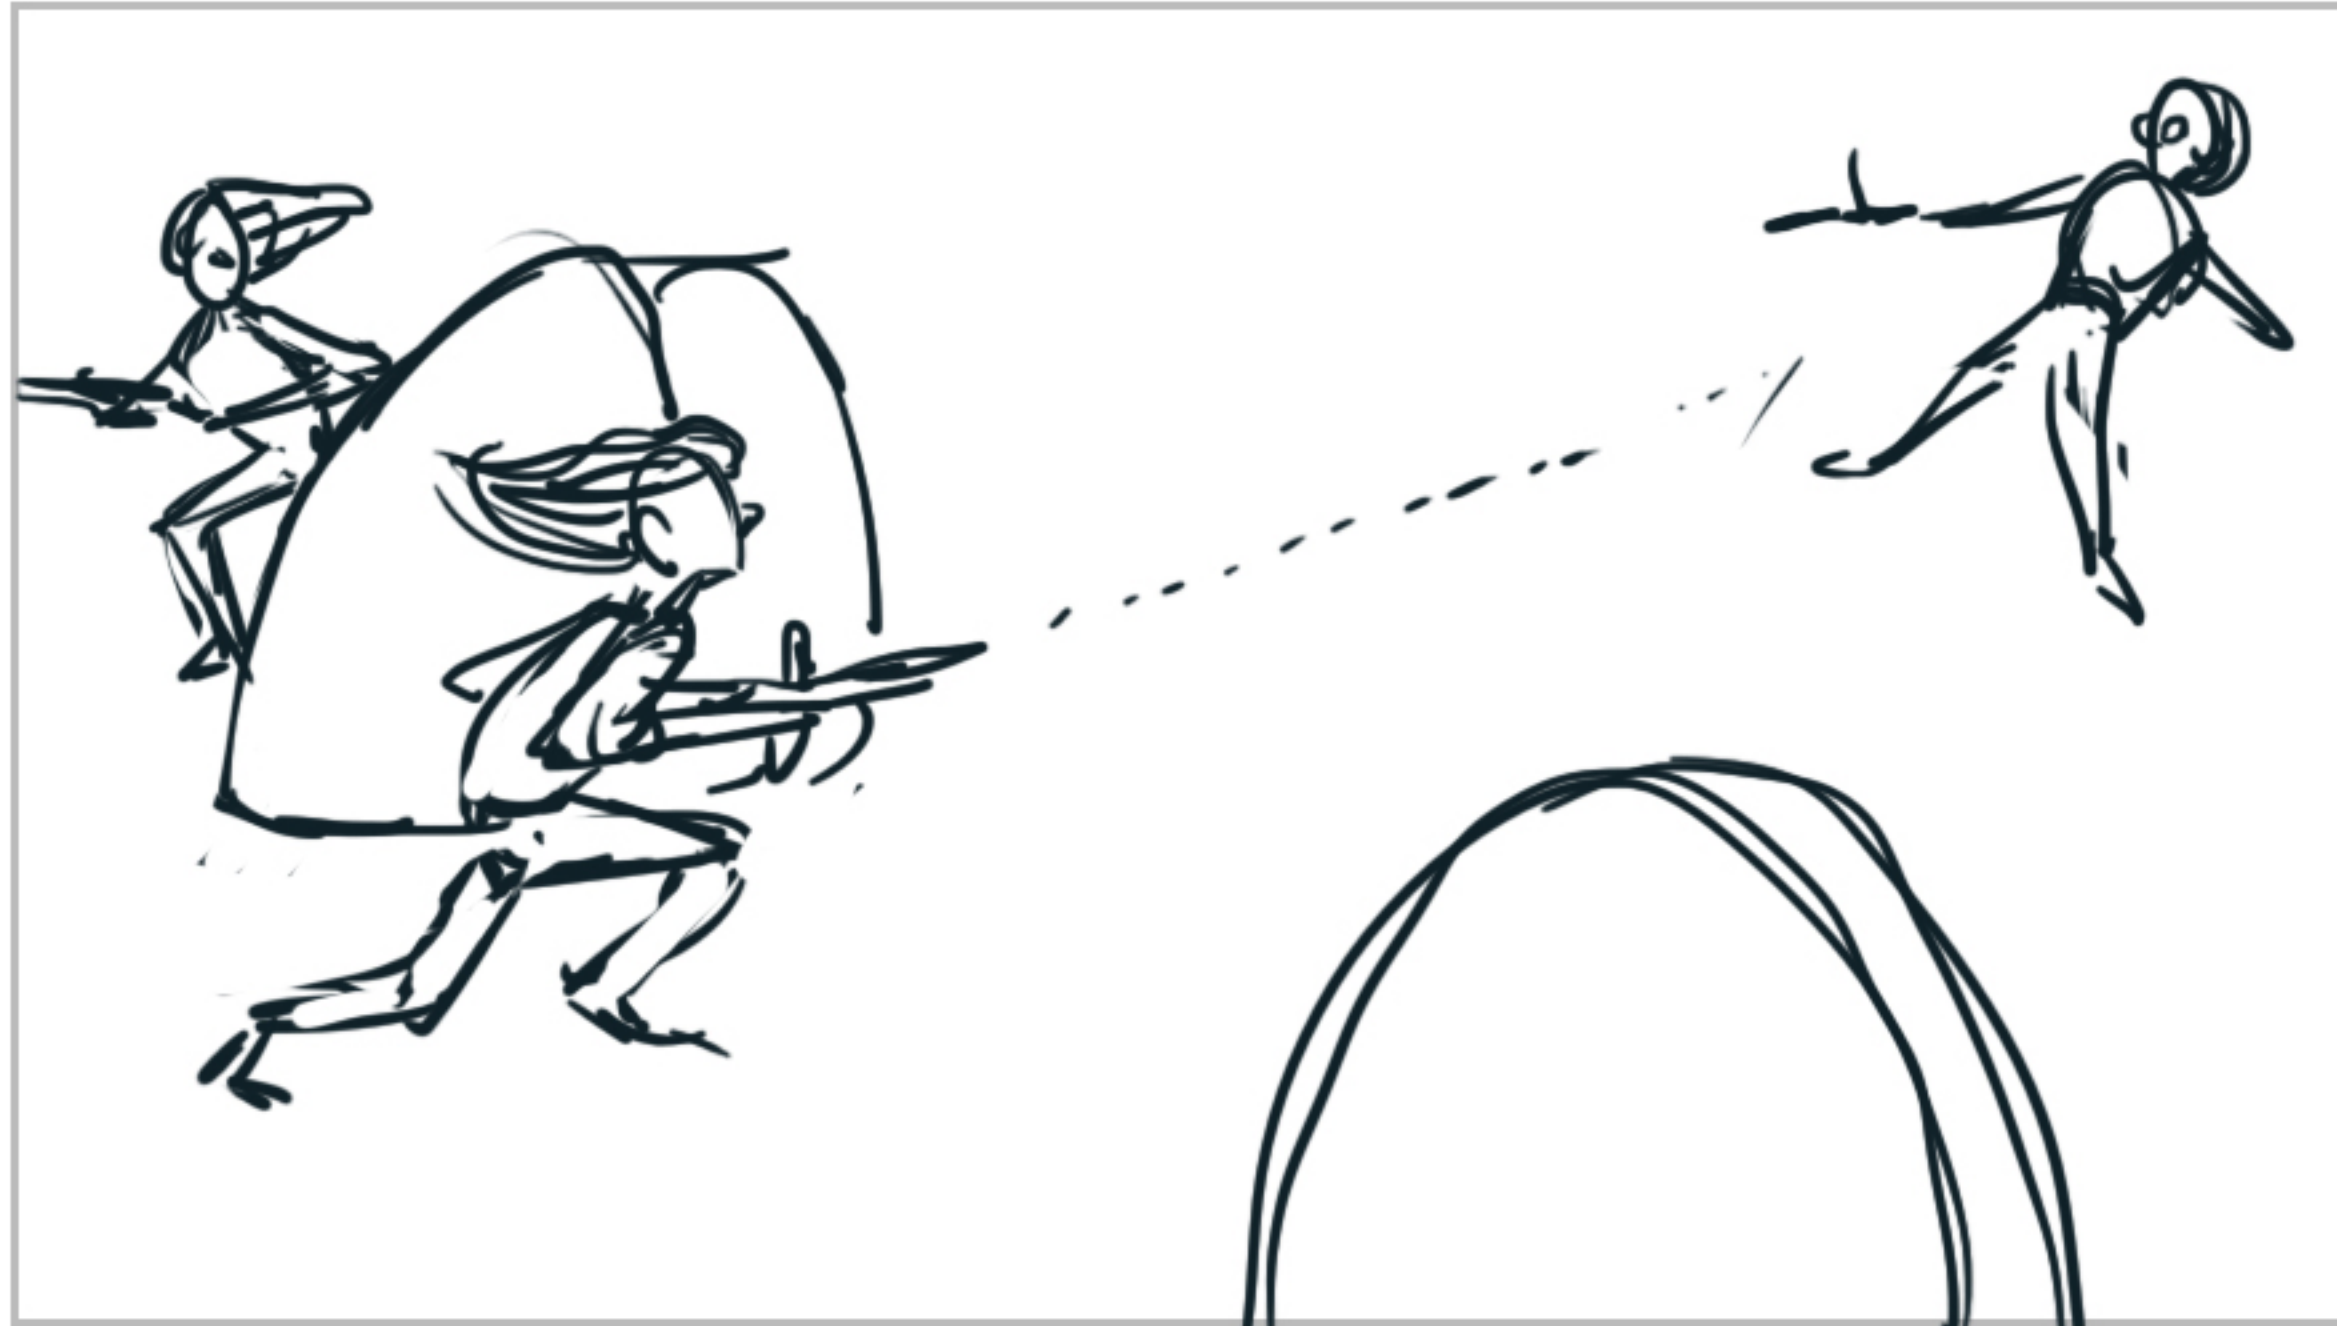

Cut scene to her hurriedly putting on her mask in a paintball field.

Still talking on the phone, she ducks just in time as paintballs whiz by.
12-up "Dialpad" made out of paintball splatter.

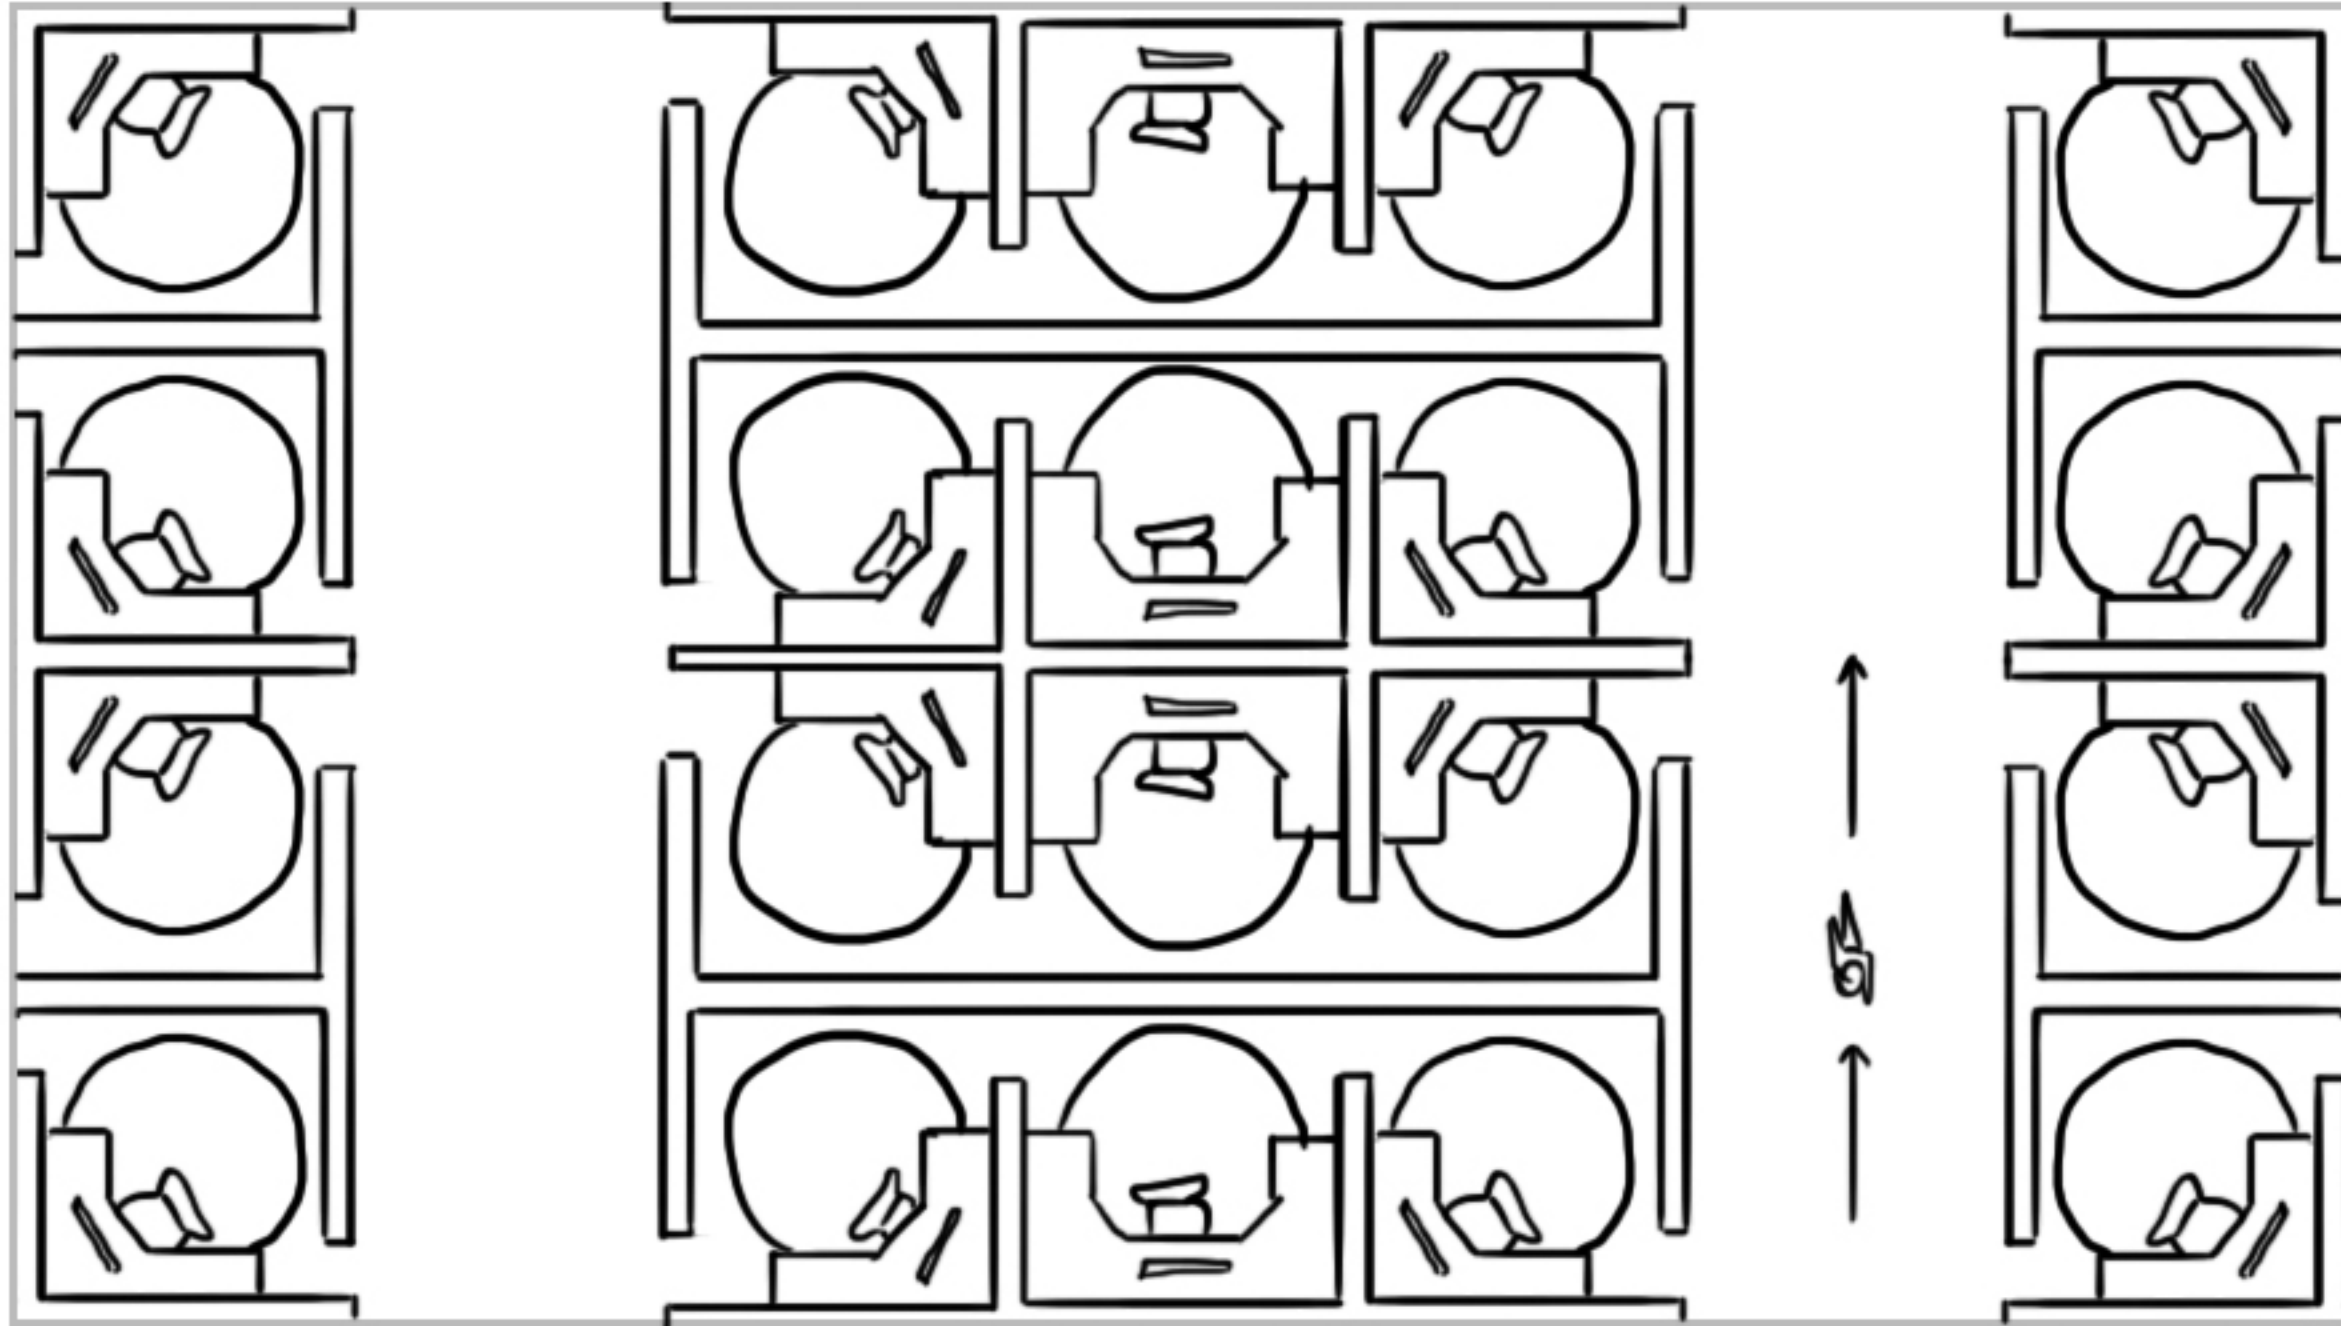

Cut scene to colleague reacting to noise.

Paintball continues while she's on the phone, she's dodging and running!

Hero shot - she is firing paintballs into the air with a cry of victory!

Cut back to office cubicle scene, we see her walking back to her desk.

Close with RingCentral tagline about mobility "We're wherever you go" with paintball platter on her shoulder.
